Bearing a Grudge

Pack off! I need to say bye,
'cause over the blink of an eye,

the bitch has crowded my mind
and is anything but kind!

It's clear who is going to lose this fight.
Yuck! - My ass! I am sick of your sight!

I am just holding back.
Remember – this here is not a crack!

You're better of shred,
and the queen of hearts wants you dead.

Just behaving like a puck,
my house should be removed of this muck!

You see - the monster is hiding and we have started fighting.

Just get away for good,
'cause you misunderstood!

Keep running Buttercup,
'cause you have also grown up.

Run over the mountains and far, far away!
Until night turns to day,

Until the birds chirrup.
Please – you have every reason to cheer up!

Even if my beast has tasted blood,
I, for one won't bring you down with a flood.

They say: „You don't hurt a friend,
to get revenge and be a fiend!“

It would be as gross as eating fairy floss and I want to be without loss.

This anger would backfire and drive me mad and in the long run I wouldn't be glad.

I need to get things right,
to stick up, to win and fight!

I wish you well,
to be „Tinkerbell“.

...and to see that this is no letter from hell...

To go back to normal,
and to say it formal.

To wish you the best,
...to get this off of my chest.

To demolish this castle of air,
'cause that would be fair!

You see - Skubby is all saggy,
it's no dog but a maggy.

It's true with us – a broken bond shouldn't be picked up!
Sadly - that got me mixed up.

With you the train has left,
and ripped a cleft.

You've always been smart,
not like me liking art.

So I wrote this in english,
so the world sees bearing a grudge is childish!
